ADVERTISEMENTS AND INDEX	196

During the past one hundred years young Christian men and women have entered Concordia to grow in faith, and have left to serve in Christ's Kingdom. For one hundred years Concordia has lived Christ. In everything we do . . . as we grow and mature, as we serve organizations, as we compete in sports, as we lead others to a firmer faith, and finally, as we anticipate our call to the teaching ministry, we have attempted to glorify God. It is for this reason that we have chosen "A Century of Living Christ" as the theme for this Centennial yearbook.

Dear President Koehneke,

This year has passed so quickly. It has been a full year; filled with all the things which contribute to our Christian growth. The commencement of Concordia's Centennial celebration has made us all more aware of God's great blessings to us. We hope that we have continued the tradition of the past one hundred years by living this one for Christ.

In many ways you have helped and guided us toward truly living Christ. You have been our daily reminder of what it is to be "a little Christ."

It is difficult for us to put into words all the things that you mean to us. Perhaps the best way is to use your own words, for we are sincerely happy and always grateful to be your "sons and daughters in Christ."

We heartily congratulate you on your twenty-fifth anniversary in the Ministry of the Word, and your tenth as our president.

We dedicate this yearbook to you, with our deep appreciation for all the many hours and days and years of work and worry which you have given for us for our Savior's sake.

Our sincere love and affection,

Your sons and daughters in Christ

President's Message

WHAT IS CONCORDIA?

Concordia is a college. It is a community of Christian scholars, It is a professional school of The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod. It is forty acres, dotted with classrooms, residence halls, faculty housing, and Grace Church.

Concordia is a place of frightened freshmen, speculative sophomores, jaunty juniors, serious seniors, and grateful graduates. It is a place to love and to be loved, a marriage bureau, a hothouse of ideas, an arena for ideological battle, and a confrontation of prejudice and stereotypes.

Concordia is a community of the successful and the failures, the company of saints who are yet sinners, the family of God and the fellowship of the faithful, the laboratory for future teachers, and the practicum for wild-eyed idealists.

Concordia is a classroom for teaching and learning, for lectures and discussions, for vigorous controversy and peaceful consensus, for changing and growing, for enrichment for service, for waking up to the issues of life and death.

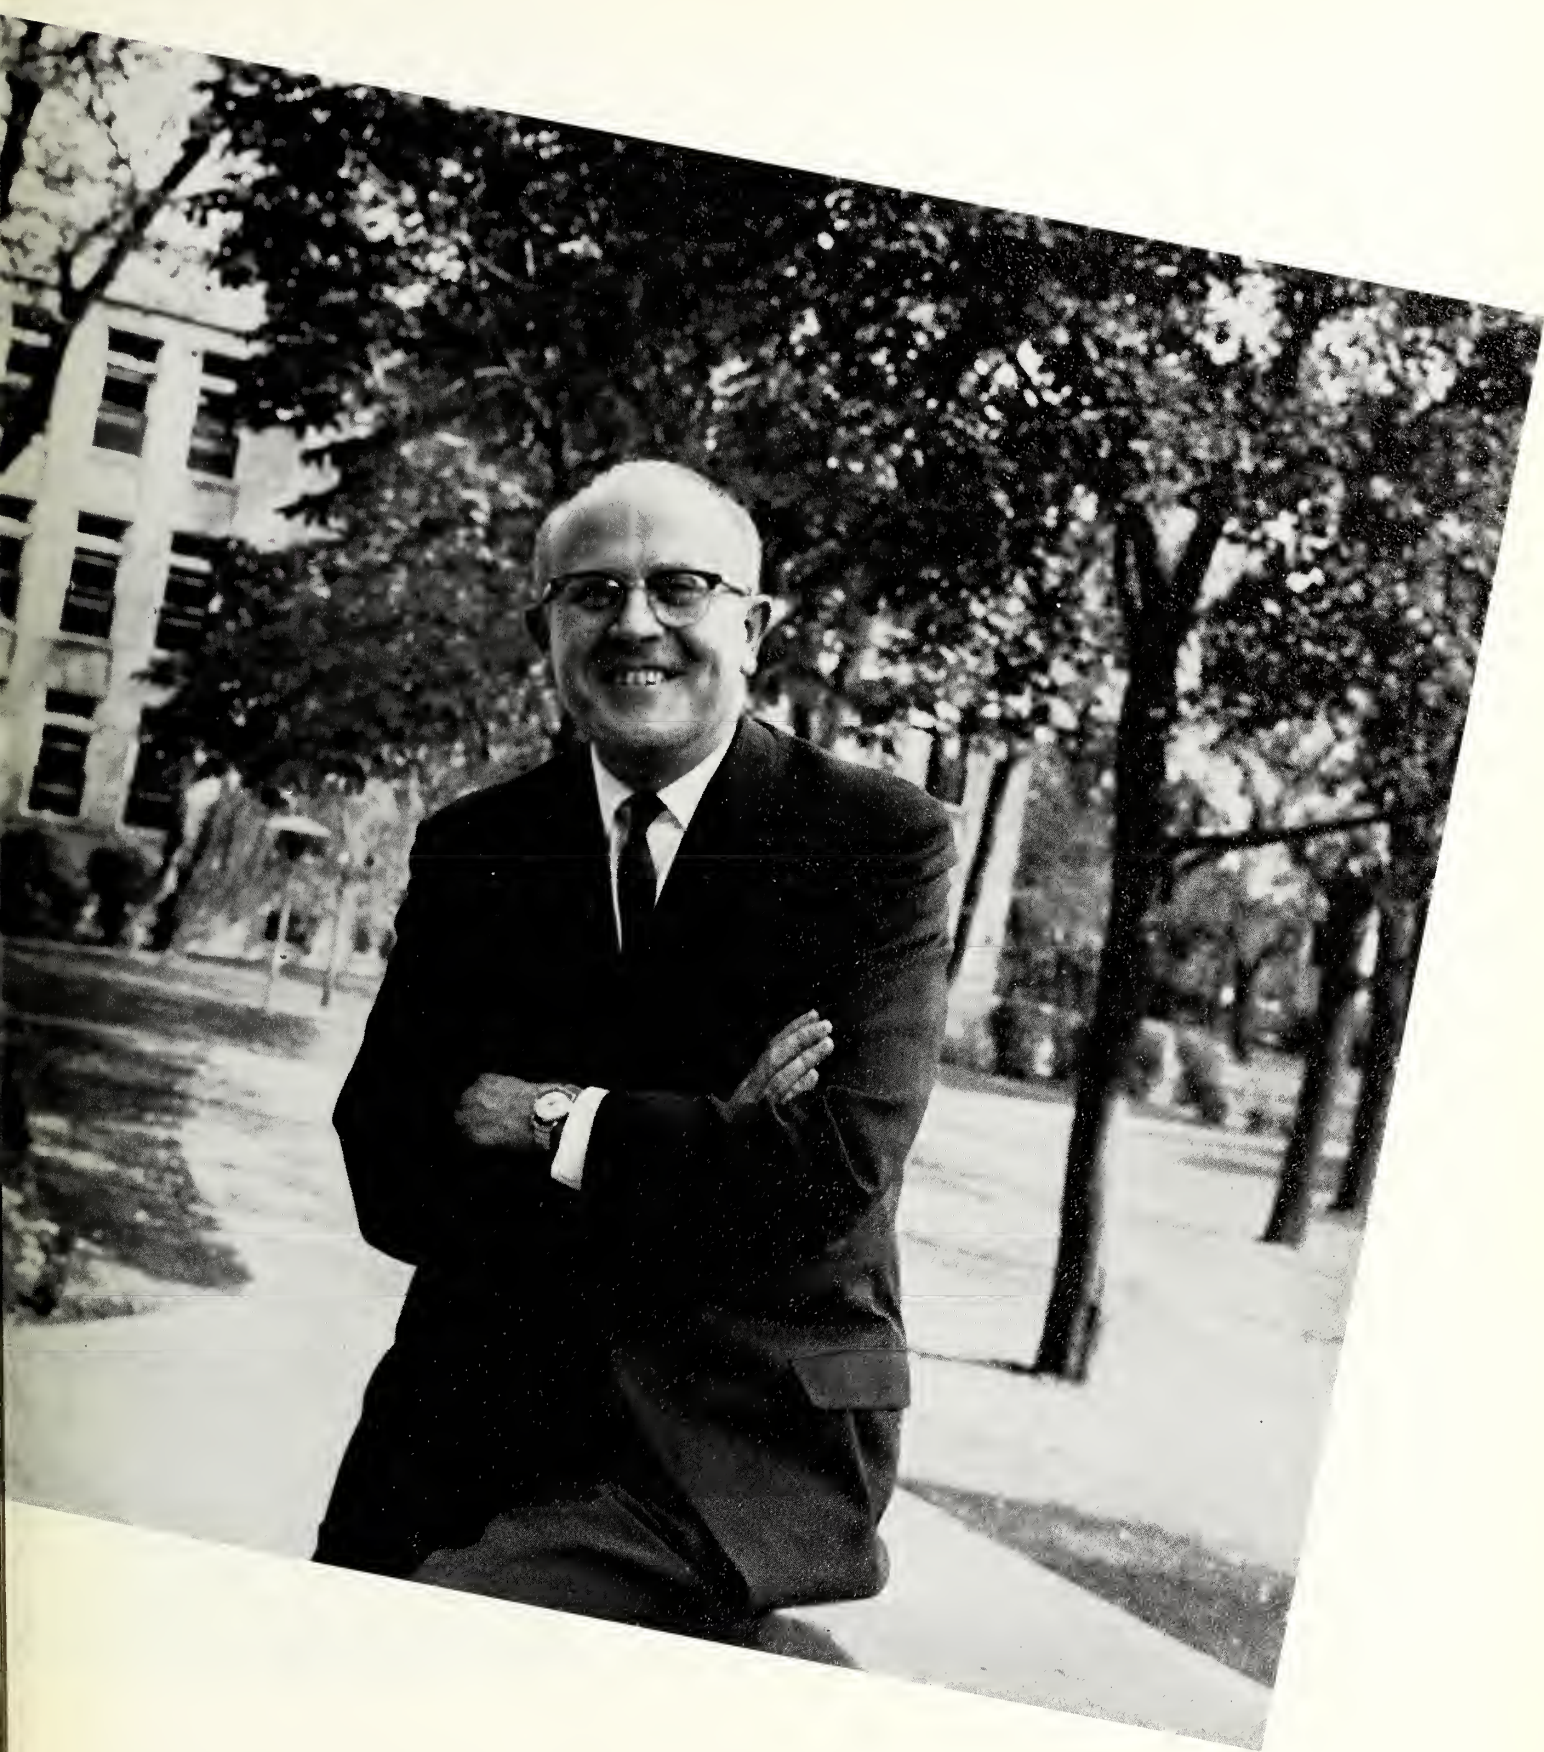

Concordia is imperfection, futility, fearfulness, frustration. It is discovery, devotion, and dramatic dreams.

Concordia is a place to pray, to read, to study, to eat, to sleep, to complain, to wonder, to hope, to debate, to agree, to play, to work, to worship, to wait for the Lord, and then to say: "Here am I, send me!" And He does!

Concordia is a century old. It's still the same C.T.C. underneath. What will Concordia be in 2064? Who cares? God does. Do you?

M. L. Koehneke
President

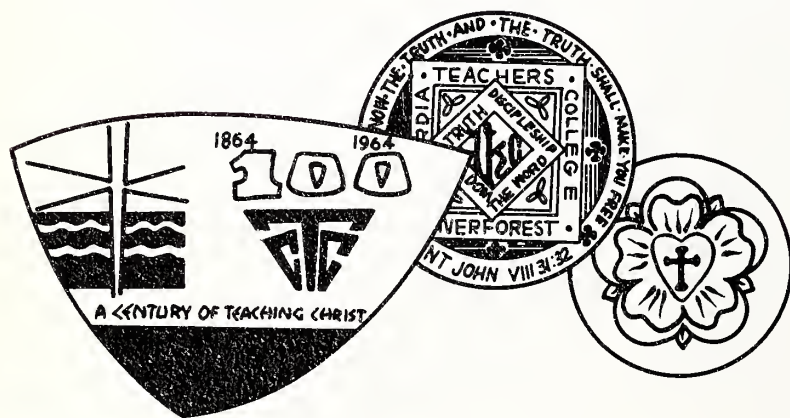

A CENTURY of Living Christ

A century of living Christ by Concordians has passed. For one hundred years Concordia Teachers College has been nurturing the teaching ministry of the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod, providing a high-quality training program for future teachers of the church.

Our church has always been concerned with Christian education. The original plans were to include a school in every organized congregation. In 1857 therefore, a normal department, under the direction of Professor Ph. Fleischmann, was established in conjunction with the seminary at Fort Wayne. However, conditions rapidly became overcrowded because of the demand for teachers who had received Christian training for the five years (3 preparatory and 2 normal) offered at the school.

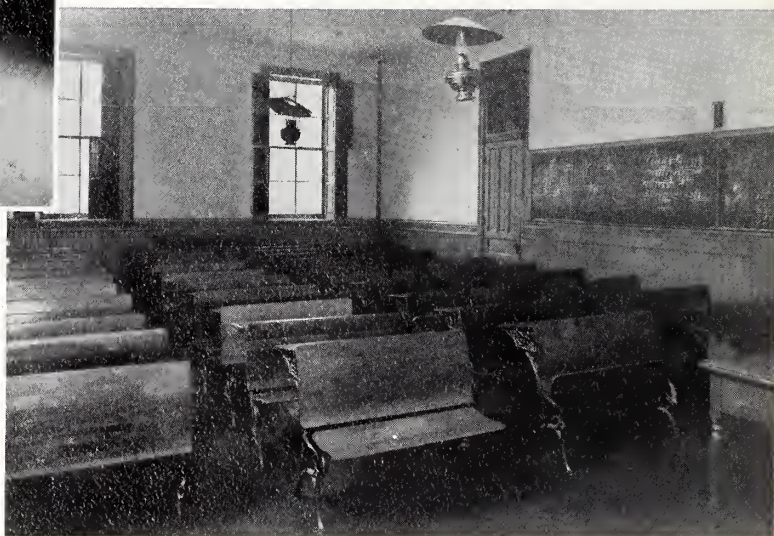

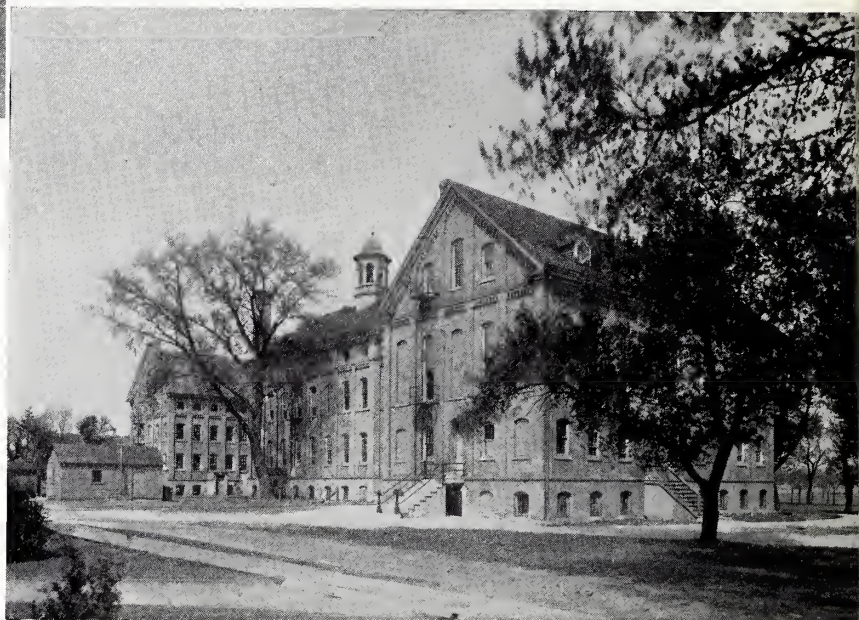

Addison Lutherans, mainly members of Zion Lutheran Congregation (now Bensonville), promised Synod land, money, and some labor if the new normal school would be built there. Synod accepted the offer and made plans to have the facilities ready by September 1864. Due to shortages caused by the Civil War, the buildings were not completed until December 1864.

In the first fifteen years of its existence the Reverend J. C. W. Lindemann served as president of the college. The first student body included students of all ages and backgrounds. There were new confirmands, older men who had worked for many years, and some new immigrants sent from Germany to learn to teach. As the student body increased in size, Synod enlarged the campus. By 1887, three dorms, classrooms, a dining hall, an assembly hall and a library had been added; in 1895 a gym was built.

President Lindemann took over the editorship of the "Evangelical Lutheran Schulblatt," now "Lutheran Education" in 1865. The periodical, the oldest educational journal continuously in publication, has been published by the faculty of Concordia ever since.

Upon the death of President Lindemann in 1879, the Reverend Eugen A. W. Krauss was called from Germany to become the second president. Before he accepted a call to the St. Louis Seminary in 1905, President Krauss saw the plant at Addison come to full growth. Under his direction, changes were made in the curricular development of the school. A practice school was established in which each student was given some opportunity to teach. The instruction in the English language was greatly improved, a truly forward step since the official language of our church was still German.

Professor Theodore Brohm, the only professor on the faculty of Concordia to be elected President, followed Krauss and served until the relocation of the college in 1913. During Brohm's administration, a fourth year was added to the preparatory school. Changes continued to keep the school on a par or above the standards of education for that time.

Life at Addison was not "soft" for the student body. Even before the new student unpacked his bag, he had to go to the straw pile and fill his mattress so that he would have something to sleep on for the next year. The School day began at 6:30 A.M. with opening devotions and classes continuing all morning.

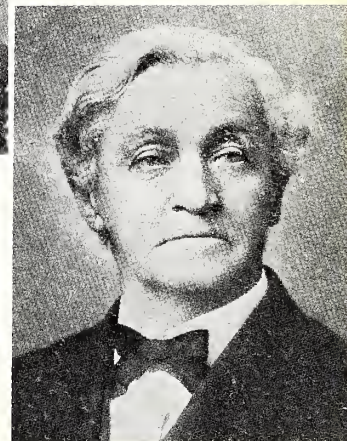

One of the redeeming features for the boys was the existence of Direktor R. C. W. Lindemann.

"Wanchleute," friendly people of the community, who did the boys' wash and usually gave them Sunday dinner. The boys didn't mind walking miles on a Sunday for a change in diet from the rather plain food served in the dining hall.

In 1911, Synod accepted the gift of 40 acres in River Forest from the Lutheran Education Association of Chicago. It had become too expensive to enlarge Addison to fit the increasing demands. The institution lacked adequate library, music, and laboratory facilities.

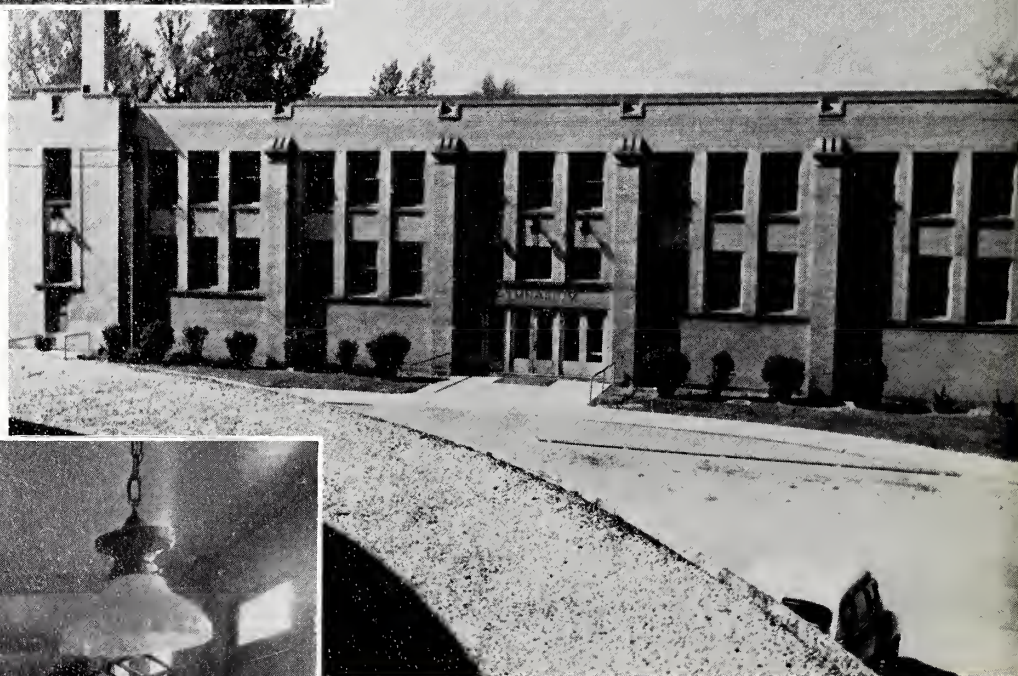

October 12, 1913, Founders Day, brought approximately 45,000 people to River Forest for a full day of dedicatory festivities which included six sermons. Facilities dedicated that day were the Administration building, Dorms A and B (Lindemann and Krauss), the Music Building (now the Student Union building) and the Commons (dining hall).

President Brohm resigned in 1913 and the Reverend William C. Kohn, president of the Northern Illinois District, was elected president of the newly located college.

On February 28, 1914, the Administration building burned, destroying both the student and faculty libraries, Professor Eifrig's museum, and irreplaceable records. The fire, which caused about $75,000 damage, was discovered by President Kohn. Faulty wiring was thought to be the cause. The building was rebuilt and dedicated October 11, 1914.

New buildings continued to indicate growth at Concordia Teachers College. Dorms C and D (Kohn and Brohm), a third floor annex to the music building, and the gymnasium had been built by 1927; faculty homes were going up gradually on Monroe and Bonnie Brae. Grace Congregation built its church on Concordia's campus in 1930 and their parish house became the site of the training school.

By this time four campus organizations were prominent in student life. The College Band, led by R. T. Rohlfig (Prof. Harold Rohlfig's father) and the Chorus were thriving organizations. The Spectator had been printing student and faculty opinions since 1925. Planning the social functions for the student body was the Extracurricular Committee.

Student government existed at this time. The president, or Sembuck (buck was a nickname for boy; sembuck was the boy who was head of the seminary) led the student body. The vice-president was the music building buck in charge of order and cleanliness in the music building. A third administrative officer was the Food Administrator, appointed by the school's administration. His job was to maintain contact between the students and food services. Each floor in the dorm was headed by a floorbuck who was both an administrator and counselor; in addition, each room had a roombuck.

Music has always played a prominent role in Concordia's history. At Addison the older students instructed the younger in rudimentary piano. There was also a hand-pump organ on which the young men learned to play the "bass." The faculty library was a flourishing collection of books, but the student library was meager until the profits from the Book Concern (bookstore) were used to buy books.

Sportswise Concordia was then as she is now, basketball crazy, although at first baseball was important. Before the gym was built, the intramural teams played outside. Games with other schools were usually runaways with Concordia winning by large margins. Football started in 1924 with great excitement, but interest faded rapidly, partly because the teams were not too successful. Since 1924, track, tennis, and baseball have also shared the sports spotlight. In 1933, the student body selected "Cougars" as the team name.

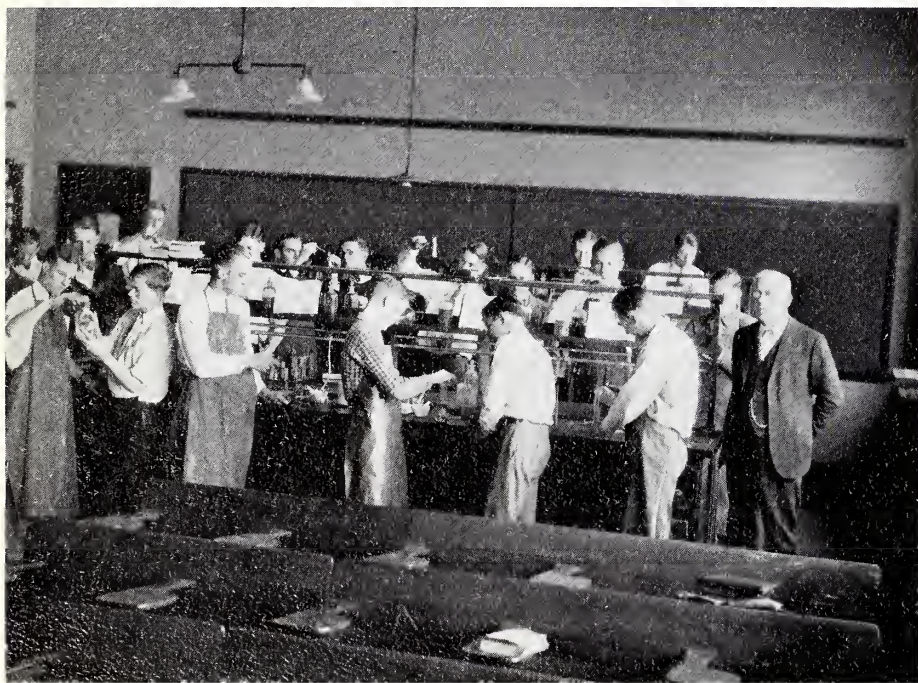

In the summer of 1933, Concordia became a hotel. Lutheran visitors to the World's Fair in Chicago were housed in the dorms and served breakfast in the dining hall for a very nominal fee.

The 1930's were the years for academic change and advancement. In 1932, the first summer session was held—a one-week seminar. Also in 1932 for the first time, promotion was by course rather than by class. A third Normal year was inaugurated in 1933 to take care of those without calls due to the depression. The Curriculum for the third year was to be strictly content-centered and the students were to be treated as graduate students. The quarter system was adopted in 1935. Extension and correspondence courses were offered in 1936 to the many teachers in the field who wished to continue their studies. In 1938, Concordia became coeducational; the girls lived in faculty homes and in the area which is now the infirmary. Synod stipulated that the number of women should never exceed 30% of the student body. A fourth Normal year was offered (by Synodical decision) in September, 1939, but it was not compulsory.

Throughout this time, the school was becoming more concerned about accreditation with the proper authorities. To achieve full accreditation, the faculty, many of them quite old, went back to school to obtain advanced degrees. The University of Illinois granted accreditation to the first two college years in 1936-37. By 1943-44, the entire 4-year program had been accredited by the University of Illinois.

Dr. Kohn resigned in 1939 because of advancing age. He became the honorary president, while Dr. Arthur W. Klinck became the new president of the college.

About this time several of the present-day professors were students and student leaders of the Concordia student body. Professor Leslie Zeddies was a big man on campus, partly because of his athletic prowess. A basketball and baseball star, Dean Carl Waldschmidt was also a leader. Professor Victor Krause was the semibuck for 1938-39.

There was other student activity in the late 1930's and early 1940's. In February 1939, the student body was quarantined for scarlet fever; fortunately there were no fatalities. The women students became involved in student government in 1939 by forming the Girls' Council, a governing and social planning organization. In 1941, Kohn Hall was made a women's dormitory. During the war, an accelerated program was conducted to get more teachers into the field.

Two of our songs, "Marching with Concordia" and "Alma Mater," were written for Homecoming, 1939, by Paul Manz, a student. In 1940, the freshmen won the first Homecoming display contest. A frosh-sophomore tussle held at Homecoming, 1941, was for a replica of the Addison bell. Field day was a big event on Concordia's campus in the late spring of each year. Athletic competitions were held; the day was topped with a play or musical in the evening. Large crowds assembled every year for this event. A student body banquet was held in the Spring of 1931, probably the first of what we call Spring Banquet today.

Student Enterprises were beginning to function. The Student Center (Campus Corner) was in operation by 1943. There is evidence that a barbershop and print shop also existed. Of course, many of the students worked off campus (in shops and babysitting).

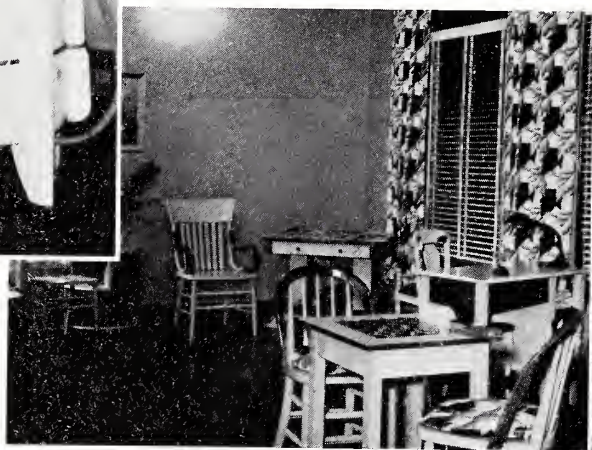

Dr. Arvin Hahn was semibuck in 1944-45. The Student Association was formed in 1948 under the leadership of Professor Victor Streufert (semibuck) and Professor Herbert Gotsch (vice-president).

Dr. J. O. Roberts was editor of the Spectator and Professor Paul Groteluschen was editor of Pillars in the late 1940's.

In May, 1949, the Library and Mary-Martha South were dedicated, although the dorm had been in use since the early winter. In the previous fall, 119 girls lived in the gym for 10 weeks until Mary-Martha South was completed. Mrs. Laura Mackensen, then Dean of Women, had her apartment on the stage.

In 1950, the high school department was dropped, but there were still insufficient facilities. In October, 1951, the music building and Mary-Martha North were dedicated.

The relocation of the music facilities enabled the Student Union to open in 1952. Professor Thomas Gieschen was semback at this time (1951-52). 1958 was the first year the student body elected representatives to Senate from the dorms.

The Cougars joined the Badger-Illini Conference in 1948 and went on to win the conference basketball title in 1950. Several years later Dr. Kenneth Domroese was a valuable member of the basketball squad. Football still was not flourishing, but to brighten up the Homecoming festivities, the first Homecoming queen was elected in 1949.

In 1950, the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools accredited the four year program of the school.

In 1953, after 14 years of leading Concordia, Dr. Arthur Klinck accepted a call to the St. Louis Seminary and President Martin L. Koehn was called. He came from a position as counselor to Parish Education in the Texas District and was installed in September, 1954. At this time the enrollment at Concordia was about 550 students taught by a faculty of 50.

In 1953, Synod officially named the dorms on campus after the former presidents; a movement to this same effect has been started by the students as early as twenty years before. The science building, named after former Professor Eifrig, was dedicated in 1955. Klinck Memorial Library received its name after Dr. Klinck's death in 1959.

Faculty homes were converted into dorms in 1956; men lived in them for the first time in 1957. Additions to Eifrig and the Service Building were in use by 1961 along with David-Jonathan Hall.

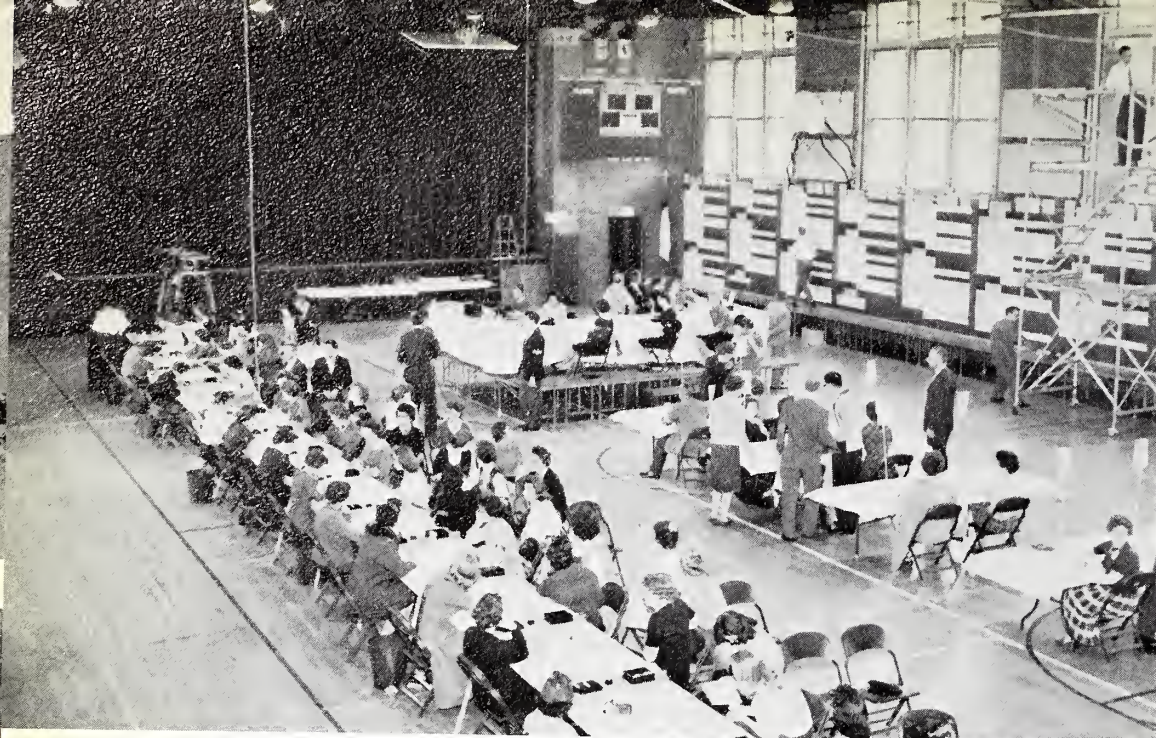

Nineteen hundred and fifty-seven was the inaugural year of Concordia's graduate program which achieved North Central Accrediting Association approval in 1963. The secondary program was begun in 1958 after a year's experimentation. NCATE (National Council for the Accrediting of Teacher Education) gave its approval to the elementary program, making it easier for Concordia graduates to become certified in various states. A new curriculum was developed which went into effect in 1961.

After nine years, the Cougars of 1961 finally won a homecoming football game. Basketball also had its big years at Concordia at that time. Sparked by Myron "Schu" Schumaker and Al "Fritz" Hermann, the basketball team received an NCAA regional bid, but lost to Valpo. In 1963, the cagers again received a bid to NCAA and won the Concordia Invitational Tournament.

In 1957 the Student Association voted to set up a fee which would eventually provide the money for a new Student Union building. SAB (Student Activities Board) had its conception in 1959, as did the Fine Arts Festival. Parent Week-end made its successful debut in 1962.

Concordia students participate in "telephone blitz" to start drive for chapel.

1963-64 is perhaps one of the most unusual years in the history of Concordia Teachers College. It has been a year of looking back, as we did when the cornerstone contents from the monument at Addison were examined. It has been a year of Centennial festivities. Ground was broken for an addition to the gymnasium and additional facilities for the Fine Arts Center. Final plans were approved for the chapel which the Northern Illinois District is presenting the college. Students and faculty members were active in a re-evaluation of themselves through CULT (Committee for the Upgrading of Learning and Teaching). A new constitution for the Student Association was ratified.

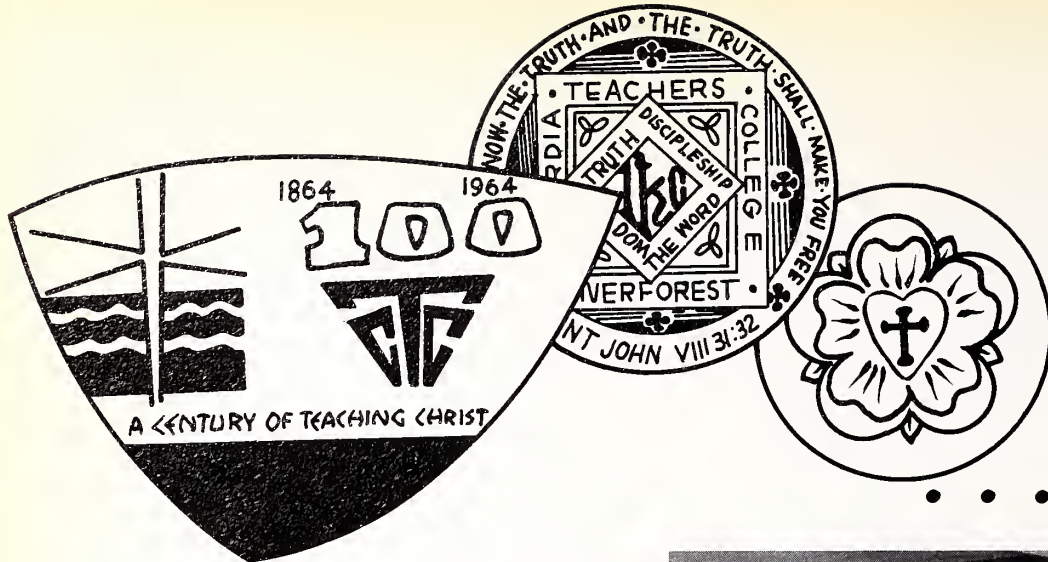

Concordia is not content looking back as is evidenced by the plans and new facilities begun during the Centennial Year. In keeping with the Centennial theme of Living for Christ, Concordia is making plans for its next Century of Living Christ.

Senate's work included overseeing all branches of student leadership and student activity organizations including student enterprises. Also they served as a medium of exchange of ideas and opinions between students, faculty, and administration.

Student body president, Bruce Kosmatka, is subjected to the judgments of the Executive Board, as he poses as the representative of all freshmen.

Religious Activities Committee

Our Saviour is first in our hearts. To serve Him is the primary function of our lives. The Religious Activities Committee gives each student an opportunity to realize that desire. The committee provides our college community with all-school worship services, educational and informational programs, field work activities, and religious discussion groups. R.A.C. is an integral part of our spiritual life.

Division of Worship

The Division of Worship is concerned with providing a variety of opportunities to worship both on campus and in the neighboring congregations. Subcommittees plan special all-school services, organize Sunday evening and infirmary devotions, and provide ushers for daily chapel services.

Witt, of International Walther League; and Dean Kell, Northern Illinois District's youth director. One of this group's main programs is a spring retreat, conducted for all interested students.

Ambassadors for Christ

Formed two years ago, this organization assumed its name from a passage in 1 Cor. 5:20, which states: "We are ambassadors for Christ, God making his appeal through us." Through their program, Ambassadors for Christ encourages Concordians to witness for their Savior by helping to recruit full time workers for the church in their home areas.

The 1963 season was one of rebuilding for the Cougar football team. Handicapped by injuries and inexperience, this spirited squad posted an overall record of three wins, four losses, and one tie. Included in the victories were triumphs over Homecoming foe St. Procopius and arch-rival Northwestern.

Coaching the Cougars again this year were Harold Brockberg, John Haubenstricker, and Marvin Bartell. All three coaches spent long hours with their team, Coach Bartell working on his own time.

Halfback Al Behnke set an all-time school rushing record by scampering for 189 yards in a single game, and amassing 736 yards over the course of the season.

The 1964 Cougars were a young team. Only three students with senior college standing were on the squad. Seniors Dan Groteluschen and Ernie Tiemann were regular starters this year, but the rest of the starters will be returning. The basketball schedule was a tough one and gave the young squad invaluable experience. This experience, along with that of returning interns Chris Rau and Dick Wegehaupt, should make a strong squad next year.

On memorable occasions such as this, it is gratifying to look back at one's individual milestones. The work, the sacrifices, the accomplishments . . . these create growth and achievement. You can now look back with pride at your accomplishments and be pleased at your achievement. Aid Association for Lutherans commends you. -- Pride in growth and achievement is also evident at AAL, where 715,000 members share a fraternal satisfaction as part of America's largest fraternal life insurance society. They participate in fraternal benevolence programs which award scholarships, fellowships and other grants in excess of $1 million annually. And, they enjoy home and family protection through ownership of modern AAL life insurance. They understand just how AAL Remembers the Members.

Each year a yearbook such as the Pillars presents a challenge by offering students opportunities to use their journalistic, organizational, and creative abilities. This year we have attempted to improve and expand the yearbook in many different ways. We hope that we have succeeded in recording this Centennial year effectively. "A Century of Living Christ" has been our message. May it continue to be the theme of the student body at Concordia.

On behalf of the staff I wish to extend our thanks to the following:

DR. ANDREW K. PRINZ and DR. THEODORE KUEHNERT, Archivists for assistance with the Centennial section.

ALFRED J. FREITAG, Superintendent of Los Angeles High School and author of College With A Cause, for historical advice and information about Concordia.

PROFESSOR J. D. WEINHOLD, faculty advisor.
